Since the body is made up of various substances with differing densities, X-rays can be used to reveal the internal structure of the body on film by highlighting these differences using attenuation, or the absorption of X-ray photons by the denser substances (like calcium-rich bones). The discipline involving the study of anatomy through the use of radiographic films is known as radiographic ...

OBJECTIVE. The purpose of this article is to show the important radiographic criteria that indicate the two types of femoroacetabular impingement: pincer and cam impingement. In addition, potential pitfalls in pelvic imaging concerning femoroacetabular impingement are shown. CONCLUSION. Femoroacetabular impingement is a major cause for early "primary" osteoarthritis of the hip.

Eleven patients (2 men and 9 women) during the period 1998 to 2000 with various elbow and wrist fractures that led to a loss of forearm supination were assessed in this retrospective review (). Patient ages ranged from 38 to 70 years, with an average of 48.3 years (). All patients were right-hand-dominant with almost an equal distribution of injuries to the dominant or nondominant extremity.
